SENATE INJURED PEOPLE SAYS COX

In Speech at Orrville Democratic Nominee Again Scores Senate "Oligarchy."

Says Group of Senators Seek Annexation of Presidency

Says "Greedy Interests" Contribute Funds.

(By Associated Press)

Orrville, O., August 21.—Another spirited attack on the "Senate oligarchy" was made here today by Governor Cox in an address replying to one delivered by Senator Harding in which Mr. Harding commended the Senate as a forum of popular government.

"The Republican candidate," said Governor Cox, "has devoted a front porch session to the defense of the United States Senate. With characteristic reactionary isolation from the current of public thought, he failed to distinguish between the United States Senate as an institution and the list of United States senators who have taken charge of an important part of the government."

"It is our contention that a group of men have formed a dominating, arrogant oligarchy in the Senate, and have deliberately interfered with the welfare of the world to the distinct injury of the people."

That the Republican Senate group was trying to "annex the presidency," also was asserted by Governor Cox, who stopped here today enroute to Canton, Ohio, where he was to speak again tonight at a "Cox Day" celebration.

"The feeling against the Senate," Governor Cox declared, "grows specifically out of the abuse by the oligarchy. Prompted by its successes in obstructive tactics, it has moved into an entirely new undertaking, and it seeks now to annex the presidency."

"If presidential responsibility is to be shared, it will be with the counselors of the leaders," said Governor Cox. "He (Senator Harding) owes his nomination to them. His gratitude is naturally to them. There is scarcely a day some members of the group is not in conference with him."

Continuing his attack upon Republican campaign contributions, Governor Cox also charged that "the greedy interests which are making the contributions have been in notorious consort with the Senatorial oligarchy."

Governor Cox again stressed the necessity for the league of nations, expanding upon former argument in its support.

SIMPLE SERVICES HONOR YOUNG GIRL

Particularly affecting were the simple services held at the Coffman home Thursday afternoon at three o'clock over all that was mortal of the young daughter, Martha, of Mr. and Mrs. Claybourne Coffman.

The little girl, who had so gladdened the hearts of her family for nine years, slept amidst a bewildering mass of flowers, the fragrance and beauty symbolical of the lovely little human flower who now bloomed in the eternal gardens.

Rev. C. R. Ferguson, the pastor of the First Baptist church, who officiated, had found in Martha a fast friend, and his voice was charged with feeling as he spoke of the sweetness of her nature, her conscientious faithfulness to duties in home, school and Sunday school, and her many winning traits.

The minister read the hymn, "Sometime We'll Understand."

The burial was made in the Washington cemetery, four little girl friends, Elizabeth Elie, Mary Louise Plymre, Mary Helen Reveal and Genevieve Price, bearing the small white casket. The little girls of the immediate neighborhood carried the flowers, sent in great profusion.

Relatives and friends who came from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ropp, of Springfield; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Meffner, Lucile and Genevieve Flee of Bainbridge; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Sexton, of St. Charleston; Mrs. Will Summers of Bourneville.

BURGLAR ALARM ATTRACTS CROWD IN SHORT ORDER

Whoever had been tampering with the window evidently got the scare of his life and fled on the instant the weird notes of the siren told of the attempt to enter the building, for the police, on the job a few moments after the alarm sounded, found no evidence of suspicious characters.

It was necessary to summon Cashier C. U. Armstrong who entered the building and shut of the burglar alarm.

TWO MEN HERE REMEMBER THE CHASE MEETING

Features of That Occasion As Remembered by Two Residents.

August 19th, 1857, was a great day in the early political history of Fayette county.

On that day, sixty-three years ago Thursday Salmon P. Chase, Governor of Ohio, addressed a great mass meeting in this city.

It was an event well worth while and the people of the county did themselves proud in honoring the state executive. As far as can be ascertained there are but two persons living in this city who attended that meeting, Messrs. Amos, Thornton and David Hopkins.

For many days the news had gone about the countryside that Governor Chase, was to address a mass meeting here and it had been talked in grocery stores and every other place which was then a news center.

On the morning the Governor was to come every one within a fifteen mile radius of Washington was up and stirring. The men shined their boots, while the thrifty housewives prepared one of the bountiful breakfasts that marked the beginning of the day in those times.

When every thing had been made ready the men mounted their horses and came horseback arriving here about noon amidst great stir and excitement that featured the day.

What sights grandfather saw when he had hitched his horse to one of the long string of hitching racks; saloons were strung along Court court street at the rate of about one every other door, and young and old shoved and pushed one another in an effort to get to the bar; high hats were not an uncommon thing and it usually happened that several of them were flattened out to a startling angle before the day was over.

In those days it was the custom for a man to give vent to his political inclination by shouting at the top of his voice and if any one was near who did not entirely agree with the opinion given a fight followed in a few moments.

By that time it was noon and grandfather ate the little "snack" that grandmother had fixed for him. In the meantime Governor Chase had arrived from Circleville over the only railroad reaching the city, the "sheepskin," which is now the Pennsylvania, and by loud and insistent acclamation had been taken to the tavern, where the finest delicacies the women of the town could prepare had been spread.

Dinner over, for it was dinner in those days, the Governor was taken to a grove, which stood where the Coffman property now stands on East street, and he was again greeted with thunderous enthusiasm by the crowd, large for that day, that had already gathered.

Every one tried to get up as close as possible to the speakers' stand, so that every word might be caught. Governor Chase had to strain his voice and attempt to speak in several different directions at the same time, for there were no amplifiers in those times, to send the human voice hundreds of feet and afford clear and distinct enunciation to every one present.

No one seems to remember just what the Governor said, when he had a chance to speak after numerous persons had appeared on the platform and as much formality had been undergone but that does not matter much for it is declared that he said enough. Speakers were given to arraignment of their opponents much more than they are at present and a particularly hot shot was welcomed by his listeners.

Women would not be in favor of the kind of political meeting held then, for the fairer sex were mostly conspicuous by the fact that they were not there at all and rarely ever took part in political activities.

It is remembered by those who were there that no mention was made of women suffrage and that it never entered their minds. The only time that women were ever used in a political campaign was when the party wanted to make an impressive showing. Then the women were invited to ride horses in the parades and to wave the flags.

After it was all over a few straggling drunks were placed in the calahorse, while the Governor rode away to Columbus in a stage coach. The driver of that coach afterwards told his children how he had driven the great man to the capital in a pouring rain and how the responsibility of such a mission had come to him as he held the reins over the struggling horse that ploughed through the mud and over sections of corduroy roads that frequently marred the highway.

Long about six o'clock the farmers gathered in little groups and went their various ways to the farm houses where twinkling lights beckoned to the tired traveler. While grandfather ate supper the children gathered around and listened in open wonder at what their father told them as he laboriously related what the Governor had said.

Grandfather was not able in those days to take home an evening paper giving the speech in full for word of mouth was the quickest way of spreading the news.

It was a great day in the history of Washington Court House as the two older residents now living recall it.

MILTON GELLER, 90 DIES FRIDAY NIGHT

Was for Many Years One of the Leading Farmers of Green Township

One of the older residents of Fayette county passed away at about twelve o'clock Friday night, when death summoned Mr. Milton Geller, at the age of 90 years at the home of his son, Mr. Milton Geller, in Green township near New Martinsburg.

Mr. Geller's illness had lasted nearly a week, and death was due primarily to old age. Mr. Geller spent his entire life in this county and was recognized as one of its most active agriculturists. Until his recent illness he was particularly active and had retained all of his faculties.

Since the death of his wife, Mr. Geller had made his home with his son and retired several years ago from the management of his own farm.

He is survived by two sons and one daughter, Marion, of near New Martinsburg; John R. of Wilmington; and Mrs. Armintha Binegar, of Bellefontaine.

Funeral announcement later.

WELL KNOWN RESIDENT HONORED IN SERVICES

Simple funeral services of quiet beauty and tribute to the late Benjamin Franklin Jamison, well known and esteemed resident of this county for 36 years, were conducted by Rev. Alexander, at two o'clock Friday afternoon.

The large home on the Leesburg pike, was filled with relatives and friends, many in attendance from all over the county.

The memoir, beautifully written by Hon. Charles A. Reid, was read by the minister. It specially pointed attention to the fact that Mr. Jamison was born on the same farm on which he died and spent most of his life there, a successful and progressive farmer.

Rev. Alexander made a comforting talk with special reference to the home life and Mr. Jamison's love for his home and friends and offered deep sympathy to the widow left so alone.

Miss Edith Gardner sang with much sweetness, "Home Sweet Home," at the request of Mrs. Jamison, and also the hymn, "Abide with Me." Mrs. George Hitchcock, the accompanist.

There were many and very handsome floral remembrances.

An unusually long funeral cortege passed from the home to the Washington cemetery, where the committal service was held.

The pall-bearers were Messrs. Ben F. Jamison, Thomas Jamison, James Jamison, Harry Taylor, Jerome Taylor and Elmer Hardway.

Among relatives from a distance were: Mr. William Jamison, Miss Belle Jamison, of Springfield; Dr. and Mrs. Furry of Springfield; Clayte Reeves, of Polaski Tenn.; V. C. Jamison, of Leesburg; James Jamison, of Sabina.

ANNUAL FAIR BIG SUCCESS

The annual Fayette county fair has passed into history as one of the most successful ever held, and it is generally conceded that the races were the best ever witnessed at the local track; that the exhibits in the various departments got beyond the usual displays and delighted the thousands who saw them, and that taken as a whole the fair was more interesting than any in recent years.

The total paid admission is given as around 18,000 for the week, and this did not include a great number of children or those who carried privilege passes.

More expense had been put on the races and in prizes than ever before, and as a result of the success this year, the grounds will be placed in better shape for the next fair, and plans will be made for extending the various departments to provide for more exhibits.

Circus Day

Monday morning the circus comes to town—the first visit we have had made to us by one of the big shows since before the war—and we are all circus hungry.

The lure of the white tops, the odor of the saw-dust rings and the wild animals never loses its attraction. When it comes to a circus and a menagerie we are all children. Time was when the circus was looked upon as a demoralizing institution and many of the better class of people were a little shy about giving to the circus the approval which their presence carried.

But always, even in those days of yesteryears, the attraction of the circus, for all, was a powerful magnet attracting both young and old alike. Always from the minute the locomotive of the first section of the circus trains shows around the curve at the edge of town, all during the unloading process, the street parade, the raising of the tents, placing of the big wagons, the "free show immediately after the parade," the two performances, until the last stake is loaded and the last of the lowly circus attaches crawls under his wagon "to bed" and the red lights on the caboose twinkle in the distance as the train pulls out, there is something gripping in the excitement of it all.

The circus now days is much better conducted than it was a score of years ago—it is now a well managed, orderly conducted business enterprise. The objectionable features have been largely eliminated and people, really anxious to go no longer bother about excuses and borrowing some little nephew or niece or neighbor child to take.

Base Ball's Tragedy

The base ball world is deeply disturbed by the tragedy at the Polo Grounds in New York last Monday when Raymond Chapman, shortstop of the Cleveland team, was struck on the temple by a swiftly pitched ball delivered by Carl Mays of the New York team and died within twelve hours without having regained consciousness.

The sad tragedy has brought forth a number of silly protests against the dangers of base ball. The death of Chapman is one of the very rare tragedies to occur in base ball and it's unusualness emphasizes the safety of the game rather than the contrary.

When we consider the thousands of men who play ball every day, the intense interest and enthusiasm of the athletes, the number of distressing accidents are few.

The tragedy seems certain to deprive Cleveland of the pennant, as Chapman was one of the most valuable players on the team. His actual loss will be keenly felt and the depressing effect on his teammates will be a great handicap.

Chapman was a fine man who had postponed entering business in order to help his team win the pennant. He was one of the men who are an honor to the game.

The Fall Flowers

The fall flowers, always one of the joys of the autumn season, are this year particularly glorious. The fields and woodlands are a mass of bloom and there is a freshness and vigor noted in each bloom and plant.

The abundant rainfall has given to the fall flowers a depth of color adding to their attractiveness and yet, even with an unusually wet season, the flowers still have the more sombre hues—to some the dull color—which is peculiarly their own.

While the asters, the golden rod, the golden glow, and the scores of other fall flowers don't flash as brilliantly on the landscape, as the spring flowers do, yet they are not the less beautiful to the eye because nature has fashioned them, in size, shape and color, in perfect harmony with the surroundings.

It is wonderful, when we come to think of it, how harmonizingly nature completes her work and how little thought we give to it all. The tender brilliant colored flowers of early spring time would be out of harmony with everything outdoors in the autumn when all vegetation has attained its full growth and has entered into the matured stage. The sunlight is more dim and hazy and the flowers, with which nature adorns the earth, are in keeping with the garb of quieter hue more suitable to the season of maturity. Nature is not so gay in the fall as she is in the spring. No longer the debutante she decks herself out with flowers more suitable to the mother.

POETRY FOR TODAY

THE GOLDEN CAGE

Earth, sea, and sky; the proud patient stars;
The gradual rainbow with its flags furled;
These are but golden unrelenting bars
Upon the secret edges of the world.
We move in beauty and are touched to tears,
Wakened to wonder, and make clean with peace;
But guarded by a thousand unseen spears
Like royal captives. There is no release.
The moments mutiny, the days rebel,
The passions clamor; better to be still;
Seek open spaces for a magic spell,
Kiss lips across a tender book, until
The last rains falling on the final leaves
Dissolve all dreaming and the heart that grieves.

Progressive Issue Coming To Fore—Need of More Activity Seen.

Governor Cox Expected To Increase Aggressiveness—Campaign Lagging Thus Far.

BY MARK SULLIVAN
(Copyright 1920)

Washington, August 21.—It is no news to say that the presidential campaign is lagging. The reasons for this lagging go straight to the heart of conditions in the two parties.

One reason lies in the personalities of the two candidates. Neither Cox nor Harding has as compelling a personality as we have become accustomed in presidential campaigns.

In every presidential campaign for twenty-four years past either Bryan, or Roosevelt or Wilson has been a candidate—sometimes two of them have been candidates. Each of these men had a larger quantity of personality than either Cox or Harding, and we have become accustomed to the "personality standard," so to speak, of these three men. It is not in either Harding or Cox to focus the public eye on, or to inject as much excitement into a presidential campaign as was injected by each of the other three during every campaign within the memory of most voters.

That alone might be explanation enough, but there are others.

Still Other Reasons

The Republican party management is perfectly willing to see the campaign seem to lag. I say "seem to lag." From the Republican point of view, the campaign isn't lagging at all. There is an abundance of activity, organized on a local basis, which the public as a whole does not notice.

For example, the entire lower house of Congress is to be elected this fall 435 members. In each of these 435 Congressional districts, except in the solid south, the Republicans are conducting an aggressive local campaign. (In fact, they are conducting aggressive campaigns in a few districts in the solid south as well, where they consider they have some chance of making a breach in that wall. The Republicans anticipate that they are going to give the Democrats a surprise in some Southern Congressional districts.)

This Congressional campaign of the Republicans is organized much more thoroughly and is being conducted much more aggressively than is realized either by the country as a whole or by the Democratic party management.

Hardly any standard of efficiency could excel the minuteness with which the Republicans are handling this congressional situation. I know of districts where the Republican national party management has eliminated one Republican contestant for congress because he was too slow going, and substituted for him a candidate who is more of a live wire.

Front Porch Not Accidental

The aggregate of all these congressional campaigns added together is one of the chief things the Republicans rely upon. Naturally, every voter who is stimulated to come out and vote for a local Republican for congress will also, presumably, vote for the Republican candidate for President.

This and a multitude of other agencies, including a small army of speakers functioning in smaller communities, which the country as a whole does not know about are among the means which the Republicans rely upon to get out a maximum party vote. It is not in the Republican scheme of things to have the presidential candidates do the bulk of the campaigning—at least, not yet—or be the chief reliance for getting out the vote.

The Republican campaign is being conducted largely according to schedule. The Democrats may gibe at Harding for staying at home, and may get as much pleasure as they choose out of jokes about the "sleeping porch campaign" and the "hammock campaign." The Republicans are quite willing for the Democrats to get as much fun out of that as they can. The Republicans have all along intended to do it just that way and they are proceeding according to a schedule which may or may not turn out to be successful, but which is not at all accidental or casual and was worked out with intelligence.

Plan to Increase Activities

Of course the Republicans do intend that things shall be a little more active later on. Their schedule contemplates a gradual acceleration of discussion and activity. A little later on, if the Republican campaign continues to go according to schedule, you will see Marion the center and fountain head of notices and utterances, carefully worked out, which will be more impressive and more attention catching than the recent outgivings. It was never the intention of the Republicans to make the campaign exciting, but a little later on there will be an effort to make it impressive in a serious way.

The fact is, it was and is up to the Democrats to make the campaign exciting, to be aggressive, and to make things lively. Things were running in favor of the Republicans. Everybody might as well admit that. The success of the Republican congressional campaign two years ago was abundant evidence of it, and the Republicans have always considered there is no reason to doubt that the trend of 1918 continues to be the trend of 1920. The only factor that has intervened is the League of Nations as an issue, and the Republicans are fully confident that by the time the election comes they will have that issue in such shape that they need not fear its reducing their strength below what was their strength in 1918.

New Jersey as the Cue

The Republicans had things going their way, and it was up to the Democrats to reverse it. It is apparent the Democrats haven't created enough activity yet, as they must create, if they are to win.

One reason why the Democratic campaign is not going actively is a baffling change made in their program sometime between April and August.

Before the Democratic convention met, it was the theory of the Democrats, and particularly of those very Democratic managers who nominated Cox, that their best opportunity in 1920, lay in taking advantage of the "wet" and "dry" issue. They believed that the drastic enforcement of prohibition was unpopular, and they proposed to capitalize that unpopularity to their advantage. In certain local elections, notably in New Jersey, they had seen a candidate for governor running on a "wet" issue, win a remarkable victory under otherwise adverse circumstances. It was New Jersey in fact, that gave them their cue for this "wet" line of campaign.

The plan of these national Democratic managers to take advantage of this condition was an intelligent and promising bit of strategy. They had it all worked out. They used to talk of their plans in terms of a military campaign, and they talked familiarly of capturing the "Eastern salient" of the Republicans. By "Eastern salient" they meant New Jersey, New York and some other eastern states which went Republican in 1916, and where a large element of the population are now restless under prohibition.

Relied on "Wet Appeal"

In detail, the original strategy of these Democratic forces that nominated Cox was this: They knew they had the solid south anyhow. With the eleven southern states that will go Democratic under any circumstances they would have 125 electoral votes to start with.

In addition to these, they believed that with a "wet" issue they would have a good chance to carry four important eastern and middle western states, namely Massachusetts, with eighteen electoral votes; New York, with forty-five; New Jersey, with fourteen, and Ohio, with twenty-four. These 161 electoral votes, added to the 125 southern ones would make 226. They would still need forty electoral votes, for the number necessary to win is 266.

To get these forty additional votes they believe they had a better chance through appealing to the "wets" than in any other way. In the first place there are three molder states, namely Kentucky, with thirteen votes; Maryland, with eight, and Missouri, with eighteen. All three of these would ordinarily be expected to be hard-fought contests. The balance might readily be swung one way or the other. Maryland and Kentucky being two of the largest whiskey manufacturing states in the Union, and Missouri being one of the largest beer manufacturing states, it was entirely intelligent to anticipate that the "wet" issue might enable the Democrats to carry these states.

Strategy Apparently Changed

All these states mentioned so far would give the Democrats within one of enough electoral votes to win. To get that extra electoral vote, as well as to take the place of any of the states as to which they might have miscalculated, they relied upon a number of other states in which they felt the "wet" issue would have considerable popularity. One was California, where the wine industry is important. California has thirteen votes; another was Connecticut with seven votes; another Indiana with fifteen votes; another Rhode Island, with five votes.

That was the Democratic strategy, for this year as originally conceived. Apparently it has all been changed. Why it has been changed your correspondent can only surmise, and he has not, as yet, sufficient assurance in the correctness of that surmise to give it the public. In all likelihood the motives that caused the change of strategy will be clear later.

The one thing that is now clear is that the plan of campaign has been changed. Neither Cox himself nor the Democratic management is doing anything along the line of the "wet" issue which, according to the original plan, was to have been the burden of the campaign.

One part of the strategy, as originally conceived, included putting a "wet" plant into the Democratic platform. That was prevented by the vigilance of Bryan and the other "drys." But that alone would not account for the apparent change in strategy. Another element that disrupted this plan of campaign was the fact that a split arose in New York state between the "wet" Democrats, who helped nominate Cox, and the "drys," who were friends of McAdoo.

Drive Changed to West

Whatever the motives, Gov. Cox, since his nomination, seems to have changed entirely the plan of campaign as originally outlined by those who nominated him. Instead of making the Democratic drive for the "wet" vote and "winning the eastern salient," Gov. Cox is apparently making his drive for the Progressives in the west.

The Vice-Presidential Candidate, Franklin D. Roosevelt, is making his long campaign tour there, and is making his appeal to the Progressive voters, who are important in that section. Gov. Cox also expects to make a long tour in the West, and he too, is laying more and more emphasis on the Progressive issue.

Your correspondent rather expects before the campaign is much older to see Cox putting less emphasis on the League of Nations and thrusting forward his appeal to the Progressives, on the basis of his own record while Governor of Ohio as his chief weapon against the Republicans. If he can succeed in getting the campaign into this field it will be a lively one, for Cox is unmistakably aggressive, almost to the point of ruthlessness, in making this sort of attack.

WIDELY KNOWN PHYSICIAN DIES SATURDAY MORN

Death is Caused by Infection Resulting From Scratch Received On Hand Ten Days Ago.

Was One of the Prominent Fayette Physicians and Secretary County Health Board.

Blood poisoning that developed into erysipelas, caused the death, at 9:20 o'clock Saturday morning, of Dr. A. O. Ervin, 42, prominent physician of Jeffersonville, at the Fayette Hospital.

Two weeks ago Friday Dr. Ervin entered the Fayette Hospital suffering from an infected left hand, which was the result of a small scratch. His condition grew worse in spite of the fact that the most expert medical attention was summoned and an operation was performed.

Following the operation he seemed to rally and throw off death, which seemed imminent, but erysipelas developed a week ago and this brought the end Saturday morning.

Dr. Ervin was one of the progressive physicians of Fayette county, and had a clientele that was county wide. He was identified with all movements that tend to bring better health conditions, and when the county board of health was formed, the first of the year, Dr. Ervin was named secretary.

He was known as a man of high principle and his personality won for him a circle of true friends to whom the news of his death was a direct shock. Especially is this felt among his fellow physicians, by which he was regarded with deep respect and with true admiration.

Until two years ago Dr. Ervin practiced in the New Holland community, where he was successful until the field was open in Jeffersonville and he thought that it would be for his better interests to seek the new location. There success again came and as an enterprising physician he won the confidence of the community.

Dr. Ervin was a graduate of the Starling Medical College in Columbus. He was also prominently identified as a lodge man, and was a member of the Masonic Order at Jeffersonville, and had attained the rank of Scottish Knight, the thirty-second degree, in the Columbus Lodge.

He was a deeply religious man and never failed in his attendance at the M. E. Church, of Jeffersonville.

Surviving are his wife and two children, Dorothy 14, and Starling 8, his mother, Mrs. Sarah Ervin, of near Bookwalter, and three sisters and four brothers, Lena, of Madison county; Mrs. C. S. Bethards, of London; Mrs. Clara Schaffer, of South Solon;

O. W. Ervin, of Jeffersonville; L. L. Ervin, of Jeffersonville; J. T. Ervin, of this city; and Ford Ervin, of Jeffersonville.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR MRS. MOLLOY

Tuesday morning the spirit of Mrs. Margaret Molloy left the frail body which suffered so patiently the trials of a severe illness lasting over several years and bravely embarked on its journey into the shadow land of death, her mind, bright with hope and faith in the life that lies beyond. Death did not come to her like a thief in the night, but for days his dark presence lingered near while her soul made ready to wing its flight, hovering between earth and eternity and loath to leave, for yet a little while, the sorrowing circle of her dearly beloved ones. And at the end when the inexorable hand fell at last upon her brow she gently bade her dear ones adieu and went fearless and unafraid to receive her sentence from that Judge who doeth all things well.

Mrs. Molloy was an ideal mother, a gentle Christian, whose hand was ever stretched out helpfully to those who came within the circle of her ministrations. No one was too lowly to receive her kind smile and cheering word. To her the whole meaning of life was contained in one word "love," and she scattered it like sunshine into the hearts of all who knew her.

Perhaps in the greater things of life as the world measures them, she had no part. Like a modest flower of springtime her life blossomed, lifting its unconscious beauty to the sky and shedding fragrance into the lives about her. The eternal struggle of pride and place was as a sealed book to her, and the world's great battle aroused her only to a prayer for the passing soul and many a whispered petition to the Prince of Peace.

Her little world centered round her three sons, Rev. M. T. Molloy, pastor of St. Columbanus Church, Loveland, O.; Daniel of Dayton and Jerry at home, whose counselor she was and her memory will shine before them like a beacon guiding them to her at the end. In the beautiful little home she has left their hearts are bowed in bitter grief over the bier where the still form of mother lies so quiet and peaceful among tall flowers the light of a wonderful eternity glowing through the white radiance of that last earthly smile she gave them and which Death has not taken away.

The Solemn High Mass of Requiem was perhaps the most impressive service ever held in the church here. Father M. T. Molloy, celebrant of the Mass was assisted by Father C. A. Ertel as Deacon; Father Martin Varley as Sub-deacon; Father Leo Walsh, Master of Ceremonies; and Father Jos. Wernke as Censor bearer. At the Side Altars the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass was offered by Father Geo. Gory and Father Frank Walsh, while the High Mass was celebrated at the Main Altar. Father Fogarty in an eloquent tribute to the memory of the deceased, brought vividly to mind the many beauties of character of her who sought only the quiet places and found joy and peace even in her suffering. His beautiful description of her last hour of earth touched every heart and will live long in the memory of everyone who heard it. The remains were taken to St. Colman's cemetery where impressive services were also held and interment made.

Those who came to extend sympathy to a bereaved family and to pay tribute to a devout Christian mother were: Mrs. Jos. Spaeth, Mrs. John Franklin, Mrs. Henry Stagger, Mrs. Thomas Flinn, Mrs. Wm. Druffel, Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Casey, Miss Mary Collins, Miss Mary Moloney, all of Loveland; Miss Mary Dexter, Mr. and Mrs. James Conner, Mrs. M. J. Conner, Columbus; Rev. Dennis Halpin, Miss Anna Halpin, Mrs. Geo. Kruszberg, Chillicothe; Mrs. M. J. Donovan, Chillicothe; Rev. Martin Varley, Rev. Raphael Markham, Rev. Frank Kelly, Rev. George Gorey, Rev. Creagar, Miss Margaret O'Brien, Mrs. Edward Ryan, Mrs. William Castillo, Miss Frances Castillo, Miss Genevieve Garrity, the Misses Loney, Mrs. Daniel Crassin, Mr. John Crassin, the Misses Crassin, all of Springfield; Rev. C. A. Ertel, Miss B. Ryan, Mrs. Jerry Haley, the Misses Haley, Miss P. J. Leary, Miss Bessie Durkin, of Wilmington; Rev. Jos. Tetzlaff, Rev. James Ward, of Dayton; Rev. W. P. ## MARY GREENLEE ANSWERS CALL Particularly sad was the death of Miss Mary Greenlee, 30, which occurred at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Greenlee of Bloomington at six o'clock Friday evening. For the last two years Miss Greenlee had been in very ill health. After holding a position in Chicago for five years she was forced to come to her home and since then she has been an invalid.

She is survived by the mother and father, a sister, Mrs. Howard Jefferson, of Bloomington, and a brother, Mr. Fuller Greenlee, of Chicago.

Funeral services will be held at the home at ten o'clock Monday morning and burial will follow in the Bloomington cemetery.

Any way is good that brings the desired results, and bad that is ineffective.

HEART DISEASE PROVES FATAL

Henry Clausung, 85, retired shoemaker and cobbler of Jeffersonville, died suddenly at his home Friday evening about ten o'clock of heart trouble.

Mr. Clausung had resided in Jeffersonville for the past 60 years since his discharge from the army after the Civil War.

He is survived by his wife, and two sons, Lewis, of California, and George, of Delaware.

Funeral services will be held Monday afternoon at the home and burial will follow in Fairview cemetery.

CHAUFFEUR HURT CAR IS WRECKED

Closed Touring Car Is Almost Demolished When It Turns Turtle Near Fair Grounds.

Skidding on the wet paved road just south of the Fayette County Fair Grounds about four o'clock Friday afternoon a large touring car turned over, was almost demolished, and the driver, Jesse Payne, colored, was injured so badly that he is in the Fayette Hospital.

The automobile, a Studebaker closed car, belonged to Hon. Harry F. Brown, for whom Payne is chauffeur. Its top was torn completely off and the body was badly wrecked.

Drivers of a wagon which Payne attempted to pass as he was coming into this city, say that he took the left side of the road and that he was around them when the car left the paving and plunged into the grass. It turned completely over and then righted itself in the road, headed in the opposite direction.

Assistance was summoned and Payne was removed to the Fayette Hospital. He received a very badly wrenched back and bruises on the left leg. He was improving Saturday.

STEEPLE JACK WORKS BENEATH UMBRELLA

A little thing like a shower during working hours does not in the least disturb an industrious steeple jack. It was demonstrated Friday afternoon.

When the electrical shower of Friday afternoon came up the steeple jack refashioning the crosses on St. Colman's left his position high above the city for only a few moments when he was again seen at work beneath a huge many colored umbrella, one of the kind that carry advertisements. By attaching the umbrella to the cross he was able to resume his work.

BETTER BABIES

The crusade for better babies has spread from coast to coast, and taken firm hold of American Mothers. ## BIG CIRCUS COMES SUNDAY SHOWS MONDAY

First Big Show To Come Since War Times.

Big Attendance is Forecasted By Interest Shown in Advance of Arrival.

CIRCUS AT A GLANCE

SHOW GROUNDS — Old Fair Grounds, Columbus, Avenue.

ARRIVAL — Aboard three special trains from Ironton, over B. & O.

First section expected before daylight. All cars unloaded before 8 o'clock.

PARADE — Leaves the show ground about 10 o'clock Monday and will travel the principal streets.

TICKETS — On sale for both performances all day by a special circus representative at Solars Book Store, Court St., and continuously during the day at two ticket wagons on the show grounds.

PERFORMANCES — Doors open at 1 and 7 p. m. Performances begin an hour later. Show grounds illuminated at night by 300,000 candle power light plant carried with the circus.

Monday is the day when juvenile dreams come true and the old become young again. Circus day, the day of all days for the kiddies, is reckoned about on a par with the Fourth of July and Christmas.

Sunday morning about the time the milkman is making his rounds the first of the three long trains bearing the Hagenbeck-Wallace Shows, one of the largest circus organizations in the world, will come slowly pulling into Washington C. H.

The first section known in the parlance of showmen as the "flying squadron" is scheduled to leave Ironton at 10 o'clock Saturday night. The other trains loaded to the guards with circus paraphernalia are due to depart shortly after midnight. As quickly as the circus specials arrive they will be placed on convenient sidings where the work of unloading will begin. And without any halts or perplexing delays the huge baggage wagons and other equipment will be transferred to the Old Fair Grounds.

The circus parade will make its start as near 10 o'clock Monday morning as conditions will permit. The pageant, promise is given, will surpass the expectations of the young and old. Three herds of elephants will tread the route and of camels, zebras, zebras, sacred cattle, yaks and other "led" animals there will be legion. Dozens of open cages will disclose their jungle inmates and trainers. More than 500 equines, ranging from the powerful plumed draft and Percherons and Clydesdales, thoroughbred chariot racers and ring horses to the sturdy Shetland ponies, ever dear to the hearts of the children, will display themselves, and there will be a myriad of other interesting and thrilling features.

ROSS COUNTY SOON WILL REAPPRAISE REAL PROPERTY

Finding no sale for bonds and the financial affairs of the city and county getting in worse shape with each succeeding month, the determination to reappraise the real estate in Chillicothe and Ross county is deemed the only solution to increase the revenue of the county and city.

Discussing the need of reappraisal, the Chillicothe News says:

"It is generally known by this time that even though the maximum levies are voted for Chillicothe the city will founder hopelessly in debt. It is also practically a certainty that Ross county will not be able to dispose of its six per cent bonds. And both the county and city need money badly. Consequently, the proposition of reappraisal looms up now with more than ordinary importance attached to it.

"There has been no general reappraisal in Ross county since 1910 and at that time the valuation was about $47,000,000, including both real and personal property. Today it shows practically $60,000,000, but the increase is seen almost entirely in the amount of personal property. Real estate has changed but little in value on the tax lists.

"Now it is known to be a fact through analysis of the 1,300 real estate transfers of the past year that real estate has in most cases doubled in value, in some instances has tripled, and in a few examples has quadrupled. There have been farm lands sold at public sale for more than four times the amount for which they are listed on the tax duplicate. These are not isolated instances; they occur time and again.

"Now if these properties were listed at their true value, it is estimated that Ross county's tax duplicate would attain a figure between ninety and one hundred millions of dollars. The increase represents the increase in the actual value of real estate. Personal property is listed at approximately its real value, it is believed.

"This total of $100,000,000 believed to represent the true value of Ross county property, is arrived at by taking first the $30,000,000 of personal property now listed. Added to this would be the now listed $30,000,000 of real estate. It is comparatively safe to double this latter figure and even to add a little more. It will thus be seen that $100,000,000 is a very safe and conservative estimate.

"If there were $100,000,000 worth of property to levy upon rather than $60,000,000, it will be seen that the taxation problem would be handily solved. It is to attain this $100,000,000 that reappraisal is desired by those who are accustomed to dealing in taxation problems."

We broke into what probably will be our last week of perspiration over the tariff in 1920.
